BROTHERHOOD FASCINATED BY DR. CONVIS' LECTURE

Lecturer Draws Vivid Picture of Life and Conditions in Russia

On the occasion of the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood last Wednesday evening, the members were fascinated by the vivid picture of life and conditions in Russia, as pointed out by Dr. Lewis A. Convis, minister of the Jefferson Park Congregational church.

Dr. Convis has spent many years in Russia and the Far East, and during the war between the Red and White Armies of Russia carried on the work of the Y. M. C. A., in the establishment of posts along the railway, and in many other ways seeking to alleviate the hardships of camp life. His talk was upon "The Soul of Russia," and was not only critical and analytical but vivid, dramatic and picturesque in the extreme.

He sharply outlined the divergence in mental outlook of life between the Russian mind, which is essentially oriental, and the Western mind, and pointed out the divergence in conception of democracy in the East and in the West.

He pointed out that the Russian ideal of democratic equality was for the high in station to descend to a higher level.

He also dwelt upon the qualities of patience and long suffering which characterizes the Russian temperament, the mystical outlook, the indifference to material values, and the love of art and music and the more picturesque aspects of life. He predicted that in course of time the Russian peasant, after long suffering and forbearance, would rise up and crush the Bolshevik regime, which represents but two per cent of the population.

Dr. Convis spoke with dramatic fervor and picturesque intensity, and his delineation of the life in the home, the tavern, the market place, and the church was vivid and colorful. At the close of his lecture he exhibited various works of rare interest and value which he had acquired during his sojourn in Russia.

Prior to the lecture, Mrs. Peaseley sang two groups of songs, in her rich and beautiful contralto voice and her singing added very much to the charm of the evening's entertainment. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. McIntosh.

Dr. Rowell chose as his news topic, of significance and interest, the recent action of the British Parliament in rejecting the proposal to modify the Episcopal Prayer Book, and in a very lucid and interesting manner pointed out the religious and political significance of this Parliamentary action in its bearing upon the existing relations between Church and State which has existed in England since the time of the Reformation.

CLUB MEMBERS ENJOY NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY

Over four hundred guests were present at the Hinsdale club on New Year's Eve, for the largest party that the club has ever held. At the last minute it was found that the Junior's New Year's Eve party, which was to have been held in the Guild hall, could be accommodated in the club house.

Two hundred and sixty-eight guests were served a delicious dinner and the dining room and ball room, and more than sixty couples came in later to join the dancers.

The club rooms were attractively decorated in holiday colors; a large Christmas tree was at one end of the ball room, and candelabra holding red tapers were on all the tables. Miniature Christmas trees, holly wreaths, branches of evergreen, and red roses were placed here and there throughout the club. Dancing began at half after nine and two excellent orchestras furnished by Walter Ford, Inc., played continuously during the evening.

There was a grand march shortly before mid-night, led by Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bell and Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Sheldon. Attractive favors were distributed to help the guests in ushering in the new year with appropriate celebration. The ladies received becoming hats, feather anklets, and feminine whistles and horns; the men received hats, caps, noise makers, and Japanese serpentine.

Just at mid-night taps was sounded and a cheery welcome to 1928 followed. Dancing continued into the morning. There were several dinner parties, the largest being that given by Mr. and Mrs. Wade Fetzer.

On Friday, January 13, there will be an informal dance, and on the 27th, the next dinner dance will be held. A mid-winter stag will take place on Saturday night, January 21, and the entertainment committee promises something new at this party.

LEGIONNAIRES CELEBRATE "NAVY NIGHT" NEXT MONDAY

"Navy Night" is what the Legionnaires have designated their first meeting of 1928 to be held Monday evening in the Guild Hall. Colwell Beatty, an ex-Gob, will act as master of ceremonies and ring master of what he chooses to call the "Navy's Traveling Circus." Of course with Mr. Beatty in charge, the affair could not help but be a circus.

The evening's fun will begin at "5 bells," (6:30), with "mess" served the Legionnaires by Eric Kylen from the "galley." A short business session will follow at which important matters concerning both the Legion and the village will be discussed. One plan which the Legion has suggested and which it will undoubtedly push with increasing vigor, is the greater utilization of Salt Creek valley including the re-damming of that creek for skating and winter sports. The village lacks adequate skating facilities and it is believed that this plan offers a solution.

LA BELLE LOIE FULLER DIES IN FRENCH CAPITAL

Celebrated Dancer Was Born in Fullersburg Tavern
66 Years Ago

"La Belle Loie" Fuller who made her first bow to the world in the historic old tavern on the old plank road which is now Ogden avenue on the outskirts of Hinsdale, and who has since bowed to the plaudits of talented artists and critics all over the world, died early last Monday morning in her suite at the Plaza Athenee hotel, in Paris. The immediate cause of her death was ascribed to bronchial pneumonia, which she contracted after a two months' illness brought on by ptomaine poisoning last October. For many years she had lived in the French capital which loved her well and which followed with affectionate hearts her brilliant theatrical career from her first appearance on the French stage in 1893, when she made her debut in the Folies Bergere in the "Fire Dance."

Many famous contemporaries, among them the novelist, Anatole France and the sculptor, Rodin, were ardent admirers of her art, for they recognized that the American girl had introduced a new quality in her dancing, the effective use of light. The lovely effects which she secured through lighting devices, and diaphanous drapery have been responsible for all modern stage lighting, and a large part of the stunts used in all the music halls of today are her invention, according to critics.

The pupils of Loie Fuller's famous dancing school in Paris were around her bedside at the last hour, and a farewell message came from Queen Marie of Roumania who was one of her intimate friends, and with whom the dancer had traveled during her recent tour of the United States. The body was cremated Wednesday and the ashes were placed in the columbarium of the historic Pere la Chaise cemetery, where many beloved of Paris from Heloise and Abelard to Sarah Bernhardt are resting until Judgment Day.

Few were present at the last rites for the noted dancer although she was the idol of thousands including the greatest artists and poets of her time. Prince Carol of Roumania was not there but sent a huge wreath of lilacs. Queen Marie, who also, was not able to be present sent a gorgeous wreath of pink rose buds and lilacs, draped with the Roumanian colors. Prince Nicholas Cantacuzene represented the Roumanian government.

"Curley" as this fearless gentleman is known by his friends, wears the coveted Distinguished Service Cross conferred for extraordinary heroism in action. HINSDALE YOUNG PEOPLE ATTEND PROGRESSIVE DINNER

A number of Hinsdale young people were among the guests who attended a progressive dinner party given New Year's Eve in LaGrange. The cock- tail course was served at the G. A. Townsend home on Sunset avenue, followed by the turkey course at the Duncan home on South Park avenue. Next the young folks went to the Bates home on South Madison street for salad after which desert was served at Harpers on Eighth avenue. Coffee and nuts were served at the Danner home, Sixth avenue. The group attended the New Year's Eve party at the LaGrange Country club after which they went to the Wil- liams home, 48 Seventh avenue, for breakfast. Those from Hinsdale who were present included Loren Mar- quardt, Miss Dorothy DeBerard, and Miss Julia Chapman.

Queen Marie, who also, was not able to be present sent a gorgeous wreath of pink rose buds and lilacs, draped with the Roumanian colors. Prince Nicholas Cantacuzene represented the Roumanian government.

Lole Fuller was born in January, 66 years ago in the old tavern which is still standing on the south side of Ogden avenue in Fullersburg, the early settlement which was named after her grandfather, Jacob Fuller who started from New York state in search of a home in 1835. This sturdy pioneer drove his emigrant wagon past the present site of Chicago with its mud and marsh, hoping to find higher ground on which to build a home. When he finally reached high ground he settled in what is now York township, oppo- site the Natoma farm, and purchased a large tract of land from the govern- ment which extended south through the territory then call Brush Hill. His large family of six boys and girls grew up and built homes on adjoining farms until nearly everyone in the town "was a Fuller." The name was changed to Fullersburg in 1851, when it was incorporated. Reuben Fuller, one of Jacob's six sons, and his wife, Delilah, lived on a farm in the present Lombard neighborhood, but the in- tense cold of that winter caused them to seek shelter with relatives in this section, and Lole was born in the old hotel where Lincoln stayed on his way to Chicago. She studied the elemen- tary subjects under Dr. Theron Sedge- wick at the old Fullersburg school, and early showed an eager interest in the histrionic art, reciting pieces with great pleasure or making speech- es on every subject, especially temper- ance, which became her crusade dur- ing her teens when she started a career as a professional temperance lecturer.

Later she entered the theatrical world and endured several years of hardship in the vicissitudes of that uncertain life until she achieved a sensational success in Paris with her famous dancer. She appeared in France, England, Germany and the United States down to 1911.

During the late war she worked untiringly in her efforts to aid in charitable work for the allies and won decoration from France, Belgium and Roumania. Her kindly heart and willing hand won for her the name of "Ma Lole" among the soldiers. After the war she developed her dancing school in Paris.

Two years ago she paid a short visit to relatives in Hinsdale, and in 1926 she returned with Queen Marie's train, although she did not stop in Hinsdale at that time. Her father, Reuben, died in 1891, and her mother, who always traveled with her, passed away 15 years ago in Paris. She is survived by two brothers, Delbert Fuller, 4523 Paulina street, Chicago, and Frank Fuller, Auburndale, Polk county, Fla.

Relatives living in Hinsdale include five cousins, Mrs. Harvey W. Brookins, Ogden avenue, Mrs. Olive Franke, who lives with Mrs. Brookins; Mrs. Sarah Heineman, 125 Walnut street, Mrs. Minnie Thurston, who lives with Mrs. Heineman, and Walter Fuller, North Oak street; and two second cousins, Mrs. Florence McDonald, 282 Hickory street, and John Ford, 19 South Garfield avenue.

MR. AND MRS. E. W. EVERETT REWIVE OLD-TIME CUSTOM

The old custom of keeping "open house" on the first day of the new year was revived by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Warren Everett when they entertained 350 guests last Monday afternoon at a delightful holiday reception in their beautiful new home at 122 Sixth street. The guests were received from 3 until 7 o'clock, and although illness prevented Mrs. Everett from taking her place at the head of the receiving line, Mrs. Harry Holscher acted as hostess. Others who received were Mr. Everett, and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. E. Kohler and Mr. David Fuller of Chicago.

The rooms of the Everett home were unusually attractive and artistic in the gorgeous display of poinsettias which were arranged in profusion throughout the house. In the living room the ivory white of calla lilies mingled with the poinsettia red, and large baskets of red roses added their rare fragrance. Poinsettias and white heather formed a lovely centerpiece on the dining room table, which was softly illumined by tall red tapers.

On the sideboard were two large fruit cakes beautifully decorated with preserved fruits, and a bowl of the English hot house grapes interspersed with oranges, pineapples and apples. Refreshments were served in the loggia where chairs were arranged looking out over the sunken garden in its holiday beauty of sparkling snow. Flower boxes which extended the full length of the 40 foot room were filled with growing poinsettias and geraniums.

Those who served in the dining room included: Mrs. Philip R. Clarke, Mrs. Frank Eustis, Mrs. A. Wilson Clokey, Mrs. Ralph R. Kimball, Mrs. Harry A. Brinkman, and Miss Florence Myers. Mrs. Ward C. Castle had charge of the lounge on the ground floor where Swedish hors d'oeuvre and egg nog were served. Mrs. John Burton assisted Mrs. Castle.

CHURCH UNIT SECURES SIR GRENFELL AS SP

The story of a great human done by a big-hearted physician told by him in a wonderfully way, is the lecture by Sir W. Grenfell, which will be given at 8 o'clock, Tuesday evening, Jan. 14 in the Union church under the auspices of Unit 13, Mrs. W. B. Key, chairman. The entire proceeds will go toward the project for the unit is working, the mission the International Grenfell Association located in Labrador. The trip will be accompanied by several feet of motion picture film in honor of his epic story of the northland.

For thirty years Dr. Grenfell braved the rigors of the Labrador climate, giving unselfishly to the work among the fishery trappers. The bleak and barren of Labrador has made life so hard for its inhabitants, sturdy descendants of Devon a set, Scotch and Irish fishermen came over during the last four centuries, have been practically from contact with civilization; small resident population is added each summer by some thousand deep-sea fishermen from Southern Newfoundland, Scotia, and the Maine coast during their share of the wealth, these courageous men who are of our own race and suffered untold hardships in northlands and waters because rudimentary accepted perquisites.

Mind and body were utterly. Not even the simplest form of and surgical aid were available.

In 1892, at the suggestion of Southborough, Sir Grenfell fired the coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland in a hospital ship to see if medical and service could be established. This simple beginning has growing the past thirty years, one of the greatest missionary centers world.

When the winter ice cuts off communication with the outside and the floating population parted, boats are laid up and the hospitals are closed. Dogs are then used and long patrols dispatched.
